University Hospital Initiative Enables Fire Fighters to Save Man's Life

Cincinnati--Equipped with heart defibrillators, Cincinnati Fire Fighters recently shocked a man's heart back to a normal rhythm, saving his life. This act is credited to a University Hospital initiative to train fire fighters to use the life-saving heart defibrillators.

"Paramedics have been using defibrillators for some time," says Michael Sayre, M.D., University Hospital emergency physician and medical director of Emergency Medical Services for the Cincinnati Fire Division. "However, we know that fire fighters are first on the scene for most cases of sudden death. That's why we feel that it is very important for fire fighters to be equipped and trained to use defibrillators. In this case, a quick call by witnesses and a fast response by Cincinnati fire fighters will give this patient another Christmas with his family."

Heart defibrillators are portable devices that can quickly shock people's hearts back to a normal rhythm. The man who received the life-saving treatment went into cardiac arrest and 911 was called. Upon arrival, fire fighters shocked the man's heart and by the time paramedics arrived the man was talking. The patient is currently hospitalized at The Christ Hospital.

The University Hospital is part of the Health Alliance of Greater Cincinnati which also includes The Christ Hospital, The St. Luke Hospital, The Jewish Hospital, and Alliance Primary Care.
